Hi. I was born in Myanmar [REDACTED] I moved to Sweden and grew up there. When I was very young, I grew up with strong family communities with many uncles, aunts and cousins. After I moved to Sweden, I adapted to more western values of freedom, self actualization and democracy.

Since I was young I have always been at the top of the class especially with maths and the sciences. I also enjoy spending time with my friends and helping them out with school work.

My hobbies are basketball, swimming, reading books, travelling and playing video games. Whatever activity I do, I try to perform the best I can be. For me, having fun comes from challenging myself to accomplish difficult tasks.

For my higher education, I studied neuroscience and psychology. My curiosity is for human nature and how different people perceive the world and diverse motivations they have. Because I grew up in different countries, it allowed me to appreciate different cultures and values. From the research I have done in neuroscience, I have created personality tests for the senses and motivation. Now I have my own business to utilize these tests in a wide variety of fields such as hr, education and product management etc.

In terms of personality, I have done the big 5 personality test. The result came out as I am very high in openness to experience meaning I enjoy being curious of a variety of things, experiences and knowledge. I am high in extraversion traits because I am social and outgoing. I am quite low in agreeableness meaning its important to make choices for myself and be decisive about things I want. I am low in neuroticism because I tend to be quite optimistic and see the sunny side of things. Conscientiousness is average across the board, its important for me to be orderly.

My favourite books are mostly nonfiction like science, psychology and philosophical books. For fiction I enjoy a bit of science fiction. For music I like pop songs as well as soundtracks from movies, games and tv shows. I enjoy going to classical music performances.

For my apperance, its a combination of south east asian (filipino, thai etc) and south asian (indian, bengali) looks. I am quite happy with my looks and my ancestry. Many people say I am often laughing, having fun and also intelligent. So I am proud of these characteristics about me.

For religion, I was born from a muslim family. My mom follow sufi islam and I remember fond memories of charity events we did in Myanmar. As I grew older, my worldview became more scientific. I am very curious of the mystery of life, meaning and the beauty of the universe.

Hey, thank you for reading my message and curious of me. By the time you read this message, you probably have grown up. How was your childhood? Did you have many challenges you faced at school or with your identity? Its ok to feel this way growing up. I felt the same way because I was born in Myanmar and grew up in Sweden.

I have decided to become a donor because I want to help families to fulfill their dreams of having children. Its meaningful for me to see happy families. I hope that didn't cause you distress knowing you have a different genetic parent. It's important to be appreciative of the family you grew up with for both positive and negative reasons.

I truly hope you will have a beautiful fulfilling future where you are happy and you are doing the things you love. If you wish to seek me out and meet me, please feel free. I want to see how you have grown and listen to your life stories, your interests, your goals. You can ask anything about me as well. My background is in neuroscience and psychology, and I also have my own business. If you want to be educated on these topics, I will teach you everything you want to know. If you want to start your own business, I will help you any way I can as well. If you want to ask me for advice or for moral teachings, I will do my best to teach you what my family has taught me. The best thing I hope for you is to fulfill your potential and lead a life of joy.
