I would say as a child I was the quiet one, kept to myself as I didn't any hassle. To be completely honest, I wasn't really great at much and that still stays. I guess when I was younger I would like to say I was good at football and pretty good at drawing (can barely draw now a days) Not religious at all or have any beliefs as that's how I've been brought up. I would say I'm very laid back, I don't get stressed out much. I guess my family and good friends are important in life, as well as good health.

I want you to know the reason I wanted to give someone the opportunity to be a parent is because they've either not got the ability to develop children or if the parents are same sex. My hopes for you is that you have a good life, be healthy. My advice to you would be "don't rush to call someone your friend" I made that mistake a few times and I went down a different path in life. Anyway I wish you well for what life throws at you, I have faith you will be ok.
