I've always wanted to help another person have a child because I've always wanted one of my own. To see an extension of me become their own person and grow into a new life and achieve things I could only dream of.

I've been good opportunities in life and I've made the most of what I could. I was always told I could do anything I wanted to. I've been naturally gifted at everything I try and I hope the part of me I give to you can continue this and have that unlimited potential.

I was always the quiet golden child. I sat and listened and matured well from learning lessons early. I have been brought up to be grateful in a very successful family where we have become business owners, athletes, lawyers and scientists. We weren't always well off and had to struggle for what we've all attained.

I was always logical and loved the sciences and mathematics in school however growing up I've now obtained a love for the sports and used both passion of science and physical fitness to help obtain the physical stature I have today. I spend my days learning new recipes, in the gym, reading about nerdy stuff and socialising with family and friends.

I have been successful in becoming a police officer. Spending part of my time out on the streets and in an investigative office I enjoy learning the whole field of work to make sure I am the best at what I do.

I was brought up Christian however I have learnt to practice faith in my own way by giving thanks for what I have and admiring the blessed life I live. I have studied lots about Hinduism, Buddhism, Islam and Sikhs and have took on traits that I enjoy about them.

I have always been mild mannered and polite through my years slowly developing myself into a strong characters where everyone warms to me and I become the life and soul of the party. Through my job I have found this has assisted me in keeping people on my side and listening to how I can help them the most. I find this helps me be successful in every career I have had.

I've been described as when I was growing up like a young Will Smith but in recent years I am being compared to a Michael B Jordan for my build, not too upset about that!

The most important thing that I have found in life is family. Having one and creating a new one. I have welcomed friends into being my family keeping strong bonds for 10 years plus.

Enjoy the years that you have with those while they are around and cherish the good and bad moments for they are, what we will remember on our death beds.

Hi, hello, very unsure on how to start these things. But that's the case for this. We all have the end goal of what we ultimately want but we aren't always aware on how to get there.

I have a huge personal drive to push me for helping people like yourselves. Having friends and family that are unable to have children has been one of the hardest things to do watch them go through all the procedures, forms and years of waiting.

I believe those in life that have an opportunity taken away from them sometimes are the most deserving of the actual opportunity. They'll have a greater understanding and reasoning to appreciate what they have more.

Some of the best advice I was given was from my late grandmother. She said to me days before she passed to never settle in life and that I have to make it the one I want to live. Since this I have strived to always attain the best opportunity for myself and make sure I can inspire others to do their best. I hope something like this can be passed on. I don't want anyone to be held back but to help push them forward.

I hope the gift I have provided you helps you get everything you want in life through a child.
