About Me

As a child, I was very active and sporty, always playing football or finding games that let us compete and have fun. I grew up in a hardworking family of four and was involved in helping with the family business from a young age, which taught me the value of responsibility and teamwork.

At school, I excelled in maths and enjoyed art as a way to relax, but my true passion was sport. I was not naturally gifted, but I worked hard to improve. Today, my love for sport remains; I spend hours watching, practicing, or talking about it. I am also passionate about politics and enjoy meeting people from different backgrounds to see the world through their perspective.

Friends and family describe me as funny, always ready to help others, and someone who stands up for fairness and education. These values align with my career as a lecturer, where I believe that quality education can address many societal issues and injustices.

I studied sports science, sports management, and education because they reflect my interests and values. My favourite book is The Picture of Dorian Gray, but I also cherish Los Santos Inocentes by Miguel Delibes. My music taste is eclectic, ranging from opera to metal, indie, pop, classical, and rap. I enjoy movies that make me think or simply entertain. Above all, I try every day to become a better person.

Goodwill Message

To the person reading this message, I want you to know that I chose to help because I believe everyone deserves the chance to become a parent. Families who go through this process demonstrate how much they want and love you, and I hope you are surrounded by role models who will guide and inspire you.

My hope for you is that you love your family, make them proud, and, most importantly, feel proud of your own journey. Be yourself, never harm others, and always help those in need. Life can be challenging, but there is always a bright side if you choose to see it.

Wishing you a life filled with love, happiness, and fulfilment.

Handwritten Note

I decide to become a donor to help single mothers and families who cannot have children naturally. After speaking with a family who shared how a donor made their life complete with 2 beautiful children, I knew this was something I wanted to do. I believe we should always help wherever we can because life is too short to be selfish.
